Slow-release watering bags for trees & shrubs

Take the stress out of planting new trees with our new TreeMate Select 20 gallon tree watering bag. This bag is designed to ensure that your new trees will survive their crucial first year after being planted. It eliminates the severe water stress new trees endure after transplanting by delivering a high volume of water directly to their root system.

TreeMate Select watering bags are designed to provide a drip irrigation system directly to tree roots over an extended period of time. The bag prevents water run-off and evaporation and provides deep saturation. It reduces the possibility of frost damage during the Spring and Fall, when new trees are most likely planted because its constant supply of moisture deflects the damage of rapid temperature changes. The bag is great for soaking before digging, for providing continuous water during summer droughts, and reduces transplant shock.

While only requiring five minutes out of your day for installation, the TreeMate is easily prepped for use without tools. Just zip the bag around the trunk, fill it with water, and leave it to do its job. For most new trees, the bag only needs to be filled 1-2 times per week.

The high concentration of water will allow the tree to continuously feed off the water supply long after the bag is empty. This increases water conservation, efficiency, and still results in beautiful, green, healthy trees.
